ABSTRACT

A locally administrable preparation for treating affected tissues effective particularly for the affected tissues caused in the rectum or the anus, which contains a pharmaceutically effective component compounds including tannic acid and potassium aluminum sulfate and a base component for use with the locally administrable preparation. The locally administrable preparation is in the form of, for example, ointment, cream, and suppository.