Abstract

Storage Container for Electronic Injection Device

The present invention relates to storage containers for electronic injection devices. The storage container comprises a desiccant in airflow communication with an interior space of the storage container, the desiccant being replaceable for continued use of the storage container.

(FIG. 2)