ABSTRACT

The present disclosure relates to a processing method for an application, and an electronic device. The method includes: in response to a configuration instruction for an audio, configuring the audio during a shooting process of a video, and displaying a microphone control in a shooting page of the video. When the microphone control is on, the video shooting process is configured to record an original sound. When the microphone control is off, the video shooting process is configured not to record the original sound.