Methods for characterizing defects on silicon surfaces, etching composition for silicon surfaces and process of treating silicon surfaces with the etching composition

Abstract

The present invention relates to a method for characterizing defects on silicon surfaces, in particular silicon wafers, a method for treating silicon surfaces with an etching solution and the etching solution to be employed in the method and process of the present invention.