ABSTRACT

A method for the treatment of liver disease and like indications, which method includes administering to a human or animal subject in need thereof a therapeutically active or prophylactically effective amount of a vasodilating agent which selectively increases the supply of oxygenated blood to the liver.

This Sheet Has Been Replaced