PROCESS AND PLANT FOR AIR SEPARATION BY CRYOGENIC DISTILLATION

Abstract

In an air distillation process, a stream of pressurized liquid is vaporized in the main exchange line (1) by heat exchange with air or nitrogen.

The refrigeration necessary is produced by one or more hydraulic turbines (9, 39) producing streams comprising at least 95% of liquid.

Figure 1