ABSTRACT

A Mould Assembly for a Hot Isostatic Pressing Process

The invention relates to a mould assembly for a hot isostatic pressing, HIP, process, comprising: an insert comprising a plurality of pieces which combine to provide a recess in which a protrusion of the component can be formed; and, a holding piece having at least one cavity in which the insert is mateably received.

[Fig 2b]