METHOD AND DEVICE FOR MEASURING PRODUCTIVITY

Abstract

In one aspect, method for measuring productivity, comprising identifying a first movement that corresponds to one movement in a set of predetermined movements which define a cycle of movements; identifying a second movement to a further movement in the set of peredetermined movements; and determining a period of time taken to carry out the identified first movement and the identified second movement to measure productivity.

Fig 1