ABSTRACT

The present disclosure relates to a washing method, a device, and a storage medium. The method includes: when a washing machine is performing washing, turning on an anti-color bleeding device of the washing machine, the anti-color bleeding device being configured to release an oxidizing active substance; controlling the washing machine to allow water-entering, and stopping water-entering when a level of water entering the washing machine reaches a first target water level; and when a duration of stopping water-entering reaches a first duration, controlling the washing machine to allow water-entering, and when the level of water entering the washing machine reaches a second target water level, stopping water-entering and washing clothes in the washing machine, the second target water level being higher than the first target water level.

FIG. 1