Impregnated textile fabric providing effective delivery of an alcoholic impregnant

Abstract

The invention relates to a textile fabric impregnated with an alcoholic preparation. The effect thereof regarding the ratio between delivery and uptake is exploited to impregnate nonwovens having a high uptake capacity moderately only while nonetheless making possible a high quantitative delivery of volatile actives to the surfaces to be disinfected.

(no suitable figure)