ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to computer-implemented invoice capture, trading access and payment systems. In particular, to a computer-implemented invoice invoice capture, trading access and payment system that facilitates the automated capture of invoices in multiple currencies, the trading of those invoices against each other and into different currencies, and which generates payment instruction files capable of effecting the efficient payment of those invoices around the world.

[Figure 1]