

Box III Text of the abstract

The invention relates to methods of monitoring treatment of a patient that includes a step of using omics data from exosomes to identify patient-specific disease-associated protein. In particular, the patient-specific disease-associated protein may be a patient and tumour-specific neoepitope.