

ABSTRACT

A processing device (410) generates a distribution of a generation index of a magnetic flux obstructing part in a core to be designed, based on a distribution of magnetic properties in a design region of an original core, and determines a region of the magnetic flux obstructing part in the core based on the distribution of the generation index.

FIG. 4