PROCESS FOR PREPARING DIALKYL DISULPHIDES

Abstract

The present invention relates to a process for obtaining dialkyl disulphides from alkyl mercaptan and from sulphur, in which a reaction intermediate present in the final disulphide is decomposed at the end of synthesis. This operation makes it possible to avoid the degradation of said reaction intermediate over time, which is responsible for the decrease in purity of the dialkyl disulphide.

Fig.: None