

ABSTRACT

A tracking device derives, based on a first captured image and a position of a first image capturing device that captured the first captured image, a three-dimensional position of a display region by a stencil (label), and stores information indicating the three-dimensional position in a storage medium in association with identification information of the plate.

FIG. 12