

ABSTRACT

A COOKING ACCESSORY

A cooking accessory includes a support for placing food or a utensil containing the food. The accessory is meant to be placed within heating range of a heat source so that the food can be cooked. The support includes a liquid passage that is contained in the support, so that water in the passage can be heated when the cooking support is heated.

Figure 1