KIR3DL3 AS AN HHLA2 RECEPTOR, ANTI-HHLA2 ANTIBODIES, AND USES THEREOF

Abstract

The present invention is based, in part, on the discovery of monoclonal antibodies, and antigen-binding fragments thereof, that specifically bind to HHLA2, as well as immunoglobulins, polypeptides, nucleic acids thereof, and methods of using such antibodies for diagnostic, prognostic, and therapeutic purposes.

FIG. 7