[ABSTRACT]

Provided is a device and the like which enable supply of a financial instrument to be automatically determined based on the supply and demand therefor in the market.

An order processing device connected via a network to a plurality of user devices respectively operated by a plurality of users and to an issuer device operated by an issuer of a financial instrument, wherein the order processing device: includes an order information storage device and an execution information storage device; receives order information respectively from the plurality of user devices and the issuer device and stores in the order information storage device the respective pieces of received order information; and matches and executes order information of which trading type indicates a “sell” and order information of which trading type indicates a “buy” from among the pieces of order information that are stored in the order information storage device, deletes the pieces of executed order information from the order information storage device, and stores execution information in the execution information storage device.

Fig. 1A