Abstract

The present invention provides a method for efficiently obtaining a complex in which a gene (mRNA) and a peptide as a translation product thereof are linked via a peptide receptor molecule, and utilization thereof. In the method of the present invention, at least one 2'-modified nucleoside derivative is introduced into a 5' end side of an antisense strand of a template DNA.

[No suitable figure]