

A B S T R A C T

5 A method of transferring information between a subscriber identification model and a mobile terminal constituting a station of a radiocommunication system in which at least some of the information transferred between said module and said terminal is protected by encryption. The subscriber identification module and the 10 mobile terminal include encryption means using a key defined at least in part by periodically-varying data specific to the system.

This Sheet Has Been Replaced

