ABSTRACT

A portable warming apparatus is described. The portable liquid warming apparatus comprises a base. The base comprises a first heating element and a battery engagement element in electronic communication with the first heating element. There is also provided a second heating element, fixed to the base and in electronic communication with the battery engagement element, at least a portion of the second heating element arranged to protrude into a liquid in a container when in use.

Figure 1