

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a method for producing a morpholino nucleic acid oligomer (each symbol is as defined in the description), the method including a step for treating a compound of formula (II) using a solution that contains an acid and a scavenger in an elongation reaction of a morpholino nucleic acid oligomer represented by the following formula and removing R^1 from the compound of formula (II) to produce a compound of formula (III).

