

ABSTRACT

An estimation model creation device (110) acquires a magnetic flux density distribution in a gap (G) between a rotor (210) and a stator (320). The estimation model creation device (110) calculates an estimated value of a motor evaluation index corresponding to the magnetic flux density distribution by using an estimation model created by learning a relationship between the magnetic flux density distribution in the gap (G) and the motor evaluation index.

FIG. 4