ABSTRACT

Provided is a currency type switching method and device. The currency type switching method includes: determining a user-selected currency type and a payment channel for a payment (110); judging whether the payment channel supports the user-selected currency type (120); and if the payment channel does not support the user-selected currency type, switching the user-selected currency type to a currency type supported by the payment channel (130). In a payment process, if a payment channel does not support a user-selected currency type, the user-selected currency type is automatically switched to a currency type supported by the payment channel without requiring a user to quit a checkout process, reselect a currency type and reenter the checkout process, enhancing user experience and payment efficiency.