

Abstract

5 The invention consists in the use of a composition of essential oils at low doses for treating influenza, acute bronchitis, inflammation and other infections of the respiratory tract. This composition is a mixture of low doses of natural substances stimulating immunity. The immunity stimulating activity is obtained by synergistic effect between essential oils at low doses used with weighting.