ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a parameter set acquisition method and device. The method includes: acquiring a target parameter set corresponding to information to be transmitted; wherein the information to be transmitted at least comprises any one of the following information types or any combination thereof: synchronization signal, direct link broadcast information, physical layer control information or user data; using the target parameter set to transmit the information to be transmitted.

Figure 1.