

Abstract of the Disclosure

A method for producing cryolite from fluorine-containing wastewater particularly discharged from factories manufacturing integrated circuits, comprises adding aluminum hydroxide and sodium hydroxide into the fluorine-containing wastewater to form sodium aluminum fluoride after reaction between the fluorine ion and the aluminum ion as well as the sodium ion. After precipitation, the sodium aluminum fluoride is then dehydrated and dried to obtain cryolite with high purity.

This Sheet Has Been Replaced

