

Abstract

The present invention relates to a process for purifying methacrylic acid, wherein the reaction mixture obtained by a reaction of methacrylamide with water is cooled by 5 mixing with an aqueous medium and then passed into a phase separator.

The present invention further describes a system for performing the process according to the invention.