ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

DOCUMENT MANAGING SYSTEM AND METHOD

A document managing system includes a document receiving section for receiving document, a document item database for storing a correspondence between the document data and bill of lading (B/L) data, a B/L creating section for creating B/L data according to the document data and the document item database. The document managing system also includes a letter of credit (L/C) storage for storing L/C data, a document storage for storing the document data and the B/L data, a document data collation database for storing a correspondence between the L/C data and the document data, a negotiation request receiving section for receiving negotiation request data for a document bill to which an identifier of the document data is set, and a document collating section for collating, according to the document collation database, the document data indicated by an identifier set to the negotiation request data with the L/C data.

Figure 1