ABSTRACT

A coated high-boiled confection characterised in that the coating comprises a solid fat having a melting point of from 25°C to 65°C, preferably from 30°C to 40°C and a method of coating a high-boiled confection which comprises applying the coating in melted form to the surface of the high-boiled confection and cooling to solidify the coating.

This Sheet Has Been Replaced

