

Abstract

162162

A surface reforming method of a metal product, wherein a platinum film is formed on the surface of a metal product by injecting onto that surface nitrogen ions, carbon ions and platinum ions in that order, and then injected onto said platinum film the second platinum ions with the aim of improving the exfoliation resistance of the platinum film being formed on the metal surface, and the abrasion resistance of the surface

G00002