(54) Title: ENHANCED RECIPIENT NOTIFICATION

FIG. 4

(57) Abstract: Embodiments allow for a first transfer application executing on a first user device to send funds to a second transfer application executing on a second user device along with supplemental data. The supplemental data includes one or more of a text message, an audio content, a video content, a drawing, a photograph, a multimedia file, and the like. The application provider server of the first transfer application and/or the application provider server of the second transfer application does not support transfer of the supplemental data. A processing computer positioned between the two transfer applications facilitates the transfer of supplemental data. When the funds transfer is processed by an authorizing entity, the processing computer generates an enhanced notification including the supplemental data, and transmits the enhanced notification directly to the second transfer application.
