

ABSTRACT

A logging method using a hypervisor and an apparatus thereof are disclosed. The hypervisor replaces, among commands of an application program or a kernel, a command in a position defined by a log definition module with a trap command, and when the trap command is executed, or an interruption or an exception occurs, stores the log data for the application program or the kernel after obtaining a system privilege and returns the system privilege.