ABSTRACT

IMAGE ACQUISITION DEVICE

Disclosed is an image acquisition device, including: a main body structure, which is provided with an image acquisition means and at least two accommodating structures, the at least two accommodating structures including a first accommodating structure configured to place a first target object and a second accommodating structure configured to place a second target object, where the first accommodating structure is arranged at a first position of the main body structure, the first position satisfying the condition that the first target object placed on the first accommodating structure is located within acquisition area coverage of the image acquisition means; and the second accommodating structure is arranged at a second position of the main body structure, the second position satisfying the condition that the second target object placed on the second accommodating structure is located within the acquisition area coverage of the image acquisition means.

[Figure 1]