

ABSTRACT

The present invention provides a central nervous system targeting pharmaceutical composition for treating various types of brain injuries. An integrin antibody is bound to a transmembrane protein of an exosome through genetic engineering, and the exosome is used as a carrier to encapsulate a therapeutic agent.

(FIG. 1A)