

Table

Abstract

5 Office space is expensive and dedicated tables occupy dedicated rooms in offices, such as a conference room housing a conference table and a cafeteria housing a dining table. A multi-functional table, enables rented office space to be smaller. One such way to provide such a multifunctional table is through a table including a table top having one or more supports, one 10 or more table leaves, translationally moveable between first and second positions relative to the table top, and one or more pairs of complementary guide members operatively linking the or each table leaf to the table top, their arrangement being such that the plane defined by the upper surface of the or each table leaf remains the same as it moves from the first to the second position and the distance separating the or each leaf from the table top during the 15 movement remains substantially the same.
