ABSTRACT

SIGNAL DEVICE

A signal device (20) for use in a restaurant which includes a plurality of lights (4) provided in a housing (3) and a plurality of associated switches (7) for selectively operating the lights to transmit a plurality of different messages. The lights are preferably of different colours and the housing is preferably collapsible and pivotally coupled to a base component (23). The base component is adapted to be clamped onto a table top (28), or any other suitable object, so that the housing can be moved from an extended condition above the table to a stored position beneath the table top. The pivotal coupling allows the device to be tilted and bent to many different angles and directions, so that the lights may be readily seen.
