Abstract of the Disclosure

A semiconductor device comprising a support substrate and a semiconductor chip mounted on the support substrate. The semiconductor chip has a thickness of 20 to 100 μm, particularly 30 to 50 μm, and can be curved. The semiconductor chip is kept curved with a predetermined curvature by it being mounted on the support substrate.