Abstract

A method for printing a print medium onto an array of workpieces supported within a carrier includes printing a first workpiece using a first workpiece support assembly, moving the carrier to a second printing area which overlies a second workpiece support assembly, lifting the second workpiece support assembly to engage with a second workpiece, but not the first workpiece, and lift it from the carrier, and printing the print medium onto the second workpiece.

FIG. 1