

Abstract

The present invention relates to a method for mounting an electronic component on a substrate through the use of a solder paste that comprises a mixture of organic dicarboxylic acids and in 5 which the thickness of the solder deposit is 25 to 200 μm .

Fig. 2