

Abstract

The present invention relates to a method for supplying inert gas to an STB in a semiconductor wafer production system that includes a step of sensing that a FOUN is loading on the STB and generating a first input signal, and a step of opening a valve for inert gas and supplying nitrogen gas to the FOUN based on the first input signal, and to a semiconductor wafer production system using the method.

Fig. 2