ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to the field of converting gaseous carbon dioxide to gas-phase products at elevated pressures with high conversion rates via electrolysis performed by a novel multi-cell CO_2 electrolyzer stack (100") that has a novel gas and fluid flow architecture formed in bipolar plate assemblies used to construct individual cells (40) of the stack (100").

Figure 4