

FISHING ROD

ABSTRACT

A fishing rod comprises a rod; and a grip body attached to a rear end of the rod. The grip body comprises a main body portion protruding from the rear end of the rod, and a first insertion portion extending from the main body portion to a rod side and inserted into the rod. A first deformation portion recessed in a direction away from an inner peripheral surface of the rod is provided on an outer peripheral surface of the first insertion portion.

FIG. 2