

Abstract

Provided is a technology for appropriately reflecting instructions for work changes received in natural language in the work list. A work reception device comprising a storage unit that stores work related to a room as a work list for each room number identifying the room, an instruction text creation unit that summarizes text to generate instruction text related to the work, a correction work generation unit that reads the instruction text to identify the changes in the work, and a correction application unit that updates the work list using the changes in the work.

Fig. 2