Abstract

A method for aligning downlink control information (DCI) alignment performed by a network device, comprises: aligning a payload of a first DCI with a payload of one of second DCIs according to a classification mode of a size of the first DCI, the first DCI being configured to schedule a multi-broadcast scheduling (MBS) service, and the second DCI being configured to schedule a service other than the MBS service.

FIG.2