

Abstract

The invention discloses method and system to analyze transitions between psycho-physiological states of individuals. The invention applies an adaptive algorithm, which sets different analysis parameters to different users depending on their physical conditions, in order to overcome the individual difference problem and to evaluate psycho-physiological status more precisely.

Fig. 2