ABSTRACT

A method for beam failure detection in a mobile communication network is performed by terminal device that determines a target reference signal resource used for beam failure detection of a first neighboring cell in the network; and performs beam failure detection on the first neighboring cell based on the target reference signal resource. A terminal device and a network device are also provided.

FIG. 3