

[Document Name] Abstract

A clothing drying device including: a rope having a rope main body and a grip portion provided at the tip of the rope main body; a main body storing the rope so that the rope can be polled out to the outside; and a receiving member provided independently of the main body and having a receiving member main body and a hook portion protruding from the receiving member main body, wherein the hook portion has an inner surface having an arc cross section and a pair of first flat surfaces provided on both sides sandwiching the inner surface, and the rope main body can be hooked so as to straddle at least one of the pair of first flat surfaces, and the inner surface.