ABSTRACT

Disclosed is an information processing device that executes a first process for generating prescribed information that enables the acquisition or management of one token, which can be distributed on a block chain network composed of a plurality of computers, on the basis of an acquisition request generated by a user terminal for acquiring the one token, and for storing the generated prescribed information in a prescribed storage area on a server device or the user terminal.

[Figure 1]