ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a method of detecting a defective battery cell, which may efficiently detect a defective cell by increasing detection power through the simple subdivision of determination conditions without additional equipment and an additional test time.

FIG. 1